Prairie Dog Information

Winner is located in the farm and ranch country of south central South Dakota. Tripp County is a hunting paradise for sportsmen. Open prairie, wooded creeks and rolling hills provide the habitat for game with rivers, stock dams and lakes offering quality fishing.

State management programs such as depredations and stocking ensure the hunter's success.

The abundance of pheasant in Tripp County has made this area famous for excellent hunting. Other game birds available in the area include grouse, partridge, prairie chicken, dove, and turkey. It is possible to bag mature spring gobblers weighing up to 25 pounds.

For the predator and rodent hunters, increasing numbers of both have led to excellent hunting. Hunters employing calling and decoying techniques are particularly successful with coyote. Tournaments and bounties are available periodically for coyote, fox and skunk as well as prairie dog.

PRARIE DOG SEASON IS OPEN YEAR ROUND.

The black-tailed prairie dog is found throughout western South Dakota. It's no secret these small, gregarious rodents are a major irritant to stockmen whose cattle compete with the burrowing grass-eaters for grazing land. The ideal time to hunt is May through September.

In many areas prairie dog towns are accessible only on primitive roads that may be hard or impassable during rainy weather. It's a good idea to have a pickup or four-wheel drive for some areas. Be aware that rattlesnakes are also plentiful in some areas and it is wise to be watchful for them.
